Why Invest in Occupational Health Services?

- The U.S. loses over $6.5 billion in man-hour production every year to occupational hazards, poor diagnostics and improper planning in the event of a workplace accident.
- All aspects of successful operations may be affected by not establishing the proper prevention, implementation and reaction plan in the event of an industrial accident.
- Proper planning and education may reduce losses by over 65% in most industrial environments, and over 90% in office settings and professional environments.
- Employees and clients react favorably to service providers that recognize the value of placing highly-skilled and properly trained personnel into their work environments.
- Establishing a culture of dynamic preparation and aggressive solutions is not an expensive proposition; however, improper implementation can be very costly.
